Internationally know for its aromatic bouquet, the Vin jaune is one of the main ingredient used into gastronomic courses.

Vineyard

The density of planting is about 6500 vines per hectare. The soil is mostly made of marl and limestone. Our production is based on sustainable practices so as to preserve the environment. Since 2014, our winery has been certified "Terra Vitis".

Wine-making process

After the manual harvest and the pressing, the fermentation happens through indigenous yeasts so as to preserve the typicality of our terroir.

Then, the wine is transferred into oak barrels of 228 litres without adding anything. The wine is going to age for a minimum of six years and three months. During this time we never top up the barrels otherwise we risk breaking the veil of yeast that appears on the top of the wine. This veil protects the wine and gives it its particularities. Regarding the evaporation (38% of the amount of wine over 6 years), this phenomenon enables to concentrate the wine that can exceed 14% of alcohol.
